This cause came on to be heard before the Honorable Benson Trimble, Judge of the Fourth Circuit Court of Davidson County, Tennesse, on the 30th day of April, 1962, at which time the Court took certain matters under advisement, and the case came on for final hearing on the 23rd day of May, 1962, upon the original bill of complaint, the answer filed thereto by the defendant, the amended and supplemental answer and cross-bill of the cross-complainant, and the amendment to the supplemental cross-bill of the cross-complainant, answers to these bills filed by the cross-defendant, the testimony of the principals and their corroborating witnesses and upon the entire record in this cause, from all of which the Court is of the opinion and finds as follows:

That the original bill of the complainant is not sustained by the proof and should, therefore, be forthwith dismissed.

That the cross-action of the cross-complainant was sufficiently proven by the testimony of the cross-complainant himself and that of his corroborating witnesses, and by the admission of adultery by the cross-defendant with one Russell Bates Huffman on December 23, 1961, on Anthony Avenue in Lakewood (near Old Hickory), Davidson County, Tennessee, and upon the testimony of other witnesses and other evidence relating to the fitness of the cross-defendant to have the care and custody of their infant daughter, the Court is of the opinion that the best interest of the minor child will best be served by it remaining with its natural father with visitation privileges heretofore set by
