ORDER

This matter came on to be heard on the 1st and 2nd days of July, 1980, on the motion of Third National Bank in Nashville to approve contracts for the sale of two tracts of real property which said creditor had sold pursuant to an agreed order entered in these adversary proceedings initiated by the holders of the first mortgages to lift the stay of Rule 601 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure. Pursuant to that order said bank undertook to sell said real property at private sale in lieu of permitting the secured creditors to conduct foreclosure sales. That order, which was entered on March 4, 1980, was approved by the attorney for the bankrupt.

EXHIBIT H

The bankrupt objects only to one of the two contracts, that being on his former residence on Wilson Pike in Brentwood, Tennessee. At the hearing his attorney agreed that the other contract was satisfactory and that sale should be confirmed.

The contract at issue is for a purchase price of $82,000 which the bankrupt insists is too low. He had indicated in his schedules and testified at the hearing that in his opinion the property had a value of $110,000. He emphasizes that the contract was entered into only two weeks after the property was put on the market and on the same day that it appeared in the multiple listing service directory.

With entry of the agreed order in March the Third National Bank proceeded to expend some $3,500 to effect certain repairs necessary to put the property in salable condition. The bank also employed the services of one of the community's better known real estate brokers who, after consultation with the bank's own real estate expert, put the house on the market with a $91,500 asking price. According to this broker most prospective purchasers did not desire to inspect the interior of the house once they saw the setting which included a view of an interstate highway. The contract originally provided for a $78,000 purchase price but was negotiated upward by the bank's broker. He expressed the opinion that this was a good price for the house under current market conditions.

Other than emphasizing that a house on an adjoining street had been listed with a higher asking price and testimony by the bankrupt's wife that a purported agent from the bank indicated that the house was worth $110,000 in July of last year, the bankrupt offered no proof as to value. Although his attorney represented to the court that he had discussed the listing of this property with another real estate agent with the implication that this agent would sell the property for a higher price, that agent was not called as a witness.

In addition to the real estate broker the bank offered the testimony of one of its officers who for twenty five years was in charge of real estate for the bank's trust department and has in excess of forty years experience in making in-house evaluations of real property in this community. He introduced from the bank's records an appraisal prepared by an outside appraiser showing the house to have had a value of $74,000 in 1977. The purpose of this appraisal was to establish a value for a loan contemplated by the bank. The bank officer indicated that in his opinion the appraisal was somewhat low and that the true value of the house at that time was in the $80,000-82,000 range.

The bankrupt testified that he purchased the house in May 1975 for $69,500 (apparently loan closing costs, etc. resulted in his total outlay being $72,800). He then proceeded to spend a little over $8,000 to finish off a room with the result that he has invested approximately $81,000 in the property.

At the beginning of the hearing the trustee indicated that he recommended approval of both contracts.

The bank objected to any participation in the hearing by the bankrupt but in light of the court's recent decision to deny the bankrupt his discharge it is apparent that he has a vital interest in the amount realized from the sale of this property since the resulting distribution to creditors will ultimately affect the amount of his continuing personal liability.

Under the present status of this proceeding it would appear to the court that the only alternative is either to confirm this sale or to lift the stay and let the secured creditors sell the property at foreclosure. The bank had merely agreed to make an effort to sell the property at private sale in order to realize a higher price than what would be received at a foreclosure sale. The bank's attorney indicated at the hearing that this was its best effort and it did not intend to proceed further. The bank officer indicated that in his opinion a foreclosure sale would result in some ten to fifteen percent less being realized on the house.

The court might be more sympathetic to the position of the bankrupt had some additional proof been offered. For example, the bankrupt could have brought in another real estate broker who might have described how he would have sold the property and what he would have anticipated receiving for it. In addition, it would have been helpful for the court had the bankrupt offered some proof that a foreclosure sale would likely be more productive than the contract at issue.

The court recognizes that it is in the best interest of both the bank and the bankrupt that this property be sold at the highest possible price.

The bankrupt having agreed earlier to permitting the bank to endeavor to find buyers for this property and the bank having done so by repairing the property and employing a reputable broker, it would appear that the controlling issue is whether the contract price is adequate under the circumstances. The more persuasive and objective proof having been offered by the bank in the form of the testimony of the real estate broker and that of a bank officer with long experience with local real estate, the contract to sell the Wilson Pike property for $82,000 as well as the other contract at issue must be confirmed.

It is so ORDERED.

Dated this 3rd day of July, 1980.
